Different way to get class' attention?

in some cases where you are going around the class you tend to hover over students and look at what we are doing or just hovering in general, sometimes it can make me feel weird in a way.

Sometimes, when someone hovers over me for a long time, it makes me feel uneasy and nervous. When I feel their presence right over my shoulder, it seems like they're watching my every move. This close closeness can be distracting, making it hard for me to concentrate on what I'm doing. I often wish for a bit more personal space so I can work more comfortably and confidently.

Very in my own personal bubble. It seems too pushy to try to seem like the main teacher and it's frustrating. They tend to enter themselves into a conversation when not needed and it feels awkward. I also believe that their tendency to butt in like when there is a single wrapper for a second, they tend to appear out of nowhere. Also forcing participation is kind of making class miserable. While also restricting students to act jokingly with each other also is a bother, when half the time the "concerning" comments are sarcastic. If understanding the students more you would see that,

Mr Warren is cool and he greets us in the hallway by name

They are a very caring and understanding teacher.

nothing bad really it was a good week, i just think mr warren needs to be more confident in teaching the class.

I got confused more than I usually do throughout class.

I like the way Mr. Warner teaches. He makes sure we get everything done and always makes sure we understand the material.

I really like the way he handles the class.

N/A

maybe be more strict towards are class

I like how he helps out a lot when we need it and overall a nice teacher.

I have no feedback.
